The Proposal to Change East River Park Concerts Discussed.

Commissioners Defer Action Until the Bandmaster Is Heard From.

George Tappan Favors Both Evening and Afternoon Concerts.

The matter of changing the time of holding concerts in East River Park from afternoon to evening was discussed by the Park Commissioners in executive session to-day. Definite action on the matter was temporarily deferred.

"Our arrangements with the musicians call for afternoon concerts," said Commissioner Arthur Muller after the meeting, "and before we take the proposed changes we must ascertain whether we can secure those mold-making evenings. We decided to consult the bandmaster, and whenever ready his reply will know what to do."

I see no reason why the change should be made if there is a general demand for it, personally I should prefer alternating the concerts so as to give one, say, on Saturday evenings and another on some night during the week. The women and children like to hear the music, you know, and some of them might object to their children visiting us at night."

After intermission Muller, who with committee members, declared himself ready to support the change advocated by THE WORLD, said that he did not call in the subject in open meeting to-day because he and his colleagues were engaged with a band concert to-morrow, as is supposed, by lithographer Lutz, whom she accuses.

An atrocious assault was made upon Mrs. Martha Lewis Springer, an old German woman, who lives in three small rooms, one light up, in the rear of 122 Park Row, about twelve this morning, as is supposed, by a lithographer named Lutz, who rented one of her rooms about a week ago.

Hebry was the motive for the crime, and she seriously if not fatally injured. Lutz has escaped.

About 10 o'clock Mrs. Springer's son-in-law, Arthur Muller, a painter, whose shop adjoins hers, heard noise in her apartments, and went to her door to see what was the matter. He found it broken and heard the old woman sobbing crying for help.

"What is the matter?" he shouted through the door.

"He has killed me!" she answered, and he ran into the street and brought Police Officer John Shevin, of the Oak street squad, into the house. Shevin burst the door open.

He found the old woman prostrated in blood, lying face downward on the floor. Blood was running from a great gash on the back of her head, and there were two clean straight cuts made in her forehead, one over each eye.

The rooms presented a scene of the greatest disorder. Bureau drawers were turned upside down on the floor, and their contents scattered about in confusion. There was a wash bowl full of bloody water in the lodger's room.

Shevin sent for an ambulance, and then turned the case over to Leavenworth Thomas, energy, of the Elizabeth street station, which predict the crime was committed.

In a feeble voice Mrs. Springer told her story. "I was at breakfast," she said, "sixty-five boy and girl had just gone to school. I had come out with a band concert to-morrow, and the bandstand was filled with a crowd of people. I had to wait until the last, and when I got up on the platform the band leader did not play an instant of my piece, so I left. I have never seen such a bad performance in my life."

Police officers, including Muller, who came to the rescue, found the old woman lying face down with a chair and helped her. I thought him back, but I could not get out. He squeezed his hand over my mouth and then made these cuts on my head."

"And he has a knife?" he was asked.

"No. I think it was a lithographer's stone. Then he stole $20 out of my pocket, ransacked the rooms, and then went out and closed the door after him. I could not get for help. I was so scared, paralytic. I don't remember anything more until the police came," she concluded.

Both the woman's eyes were blackened and she was very weak from loss of blood. She has a husband, who is in the business across the way, and he will take care of her. I am afraid he will not be able to pay the rent, and the two girls and a boy,

The third girl is married to Muller, while Bertha, twelve years old, and John, aged 10, are disabled and have been supported by their mother, who has eaten out of her pockets by renting one of her rooms. She has lived in the house about ten years.

She was taken to the Chambers street Hospital. No one seemed to know later, and Mrs. Springer could not even tell her true name. Relatives of the sixth precinct are looking for her.

At the hospital Surgeon Stone sewed up fourteen scalp wounds in the woman's head, indicating very strongly the movement for a new residence. These in charge of the games to be held at Travers Island on June 1st, and the money will be given to the American Federation of Labor.
